

ADDENDA TO CALDERDALE WAR DEAD

Since the publication of the First Edition of Calderdale War Dead in 1995 there have been important advances in the retrieval of data regarding the dead of the two wars, allowing us to identify many extra men and to amplify the details of many others.

First was the publication by Hayward of Polstead in 1995 of Chris Hobson's Airmen Died in the Great War complementing the earlier Soldiers Died. A companion series covering the Army dead of the Second World War is being published but has, so far, only dealt with the Guards and RAC.

Recently Mr Vernon Brearley of Crossley-Heath School in Halifax has trawled through the archives of the former Crossley & Porter School, identifying many of the men whom we only knew as names on the school war memorials (hereafter referred to as C&PA). Since the school was then an orphanage it drew boarding pupils from a wide area, many of them with no obvious connection with Calderdale. This has permitted us to look for them on the national lists of war dead.

Searching for such individuals has been made possible by the leap into the IT era. First, Soldiers Died was issued on CD-ROM. Hitherto the men were listed only by regiments and battalions. If we did not know the dead soldier's regiment it made identification impossible. On the computer however all the names are listed simply by alphabetical order of surnames, so it is possible to go through all the men of the same name to identify, where possible, the man in question.

More important still was the inauguration on the 9th November 1998 of the Commonwealth War Graves website (www.cwgc.org) under the title of Debt of Honour Register (hereafter referred to as DHR). In preparing the first edition we simply scoured through the printed volumes, each covering a particular graveyard or memorial, looking for Calderdale addresses of next-of-kin. Since many men, particularly those on memorials, had no recorded address it was impossible to identify a particular man in these lists. Like the Soldiers Died, these data are now available on the Internet in a list arranged alphabetically by surname. Here again it is possible to go through the lists looking for clues to identity, though even now the commoner names often present insurmountable problems.

Together these new sources of information have allowed us to identify many men for whom we previously only had a name, and to establish where they were either buried or commemorated. Since, in theory every dead serviceman should appear as one or the other, where we can find no trace, it is now possible to suggest that some of the men in question eventually turned up. However we have only deleted names where we are sure that this happened.

The following amendments are listed according to page numbers in the First Edition. An asterisk indicates a name not previously recorded.
